I have been very much confused to choose a path in between two sectors,one with a very passionate sector for me but not liked by so many people including my family,i am good at other one also but i don't have any passion towards it.

The one and only one vision for me is to do a very well paid and comfortable and enjoyable job(i think the trending sector lag in here) and in the next 3-5years i want buy/build a very modernised and spacious home with a well gardened and surrounded with whole lot of birds(in my house).

I want to live my working life happily with my parents and spend time with them because it's the time I have to tell them to take a rest and live happily.Till now they have been working so much and spending lots of time to run the family.I just want live like myself now or in near future i don't want to get influenced by anybody(except parents tough,they are the one who enlighten and throw some light).

I am very happy that I don't have anything that is needed to go off,my parents have given me very values with their guidance and support. I didn't develop any of the bad qualities mentioned.

Thought process is a thing where I need some insight into it,it is the one which I have to look into and keep working on,because in some situations I feel like letting go off from this situation which is very much needed to be changed.

The old stuff which I had,I don't want to shed any of them,because those values always keep me happy and it will show me the right path where I have to travel.

I see my future beginning after the completion of my btech because at this point I will get to know how the actual world works and how the work pressure and personal pressure will give u psychological issues but the values I had learnt will be very helpful in overcoming this.

The prototype will be like the place where you don't need to blindly run behind anything and you are not judged by anyone you live with.and the prototype where you are able to share your thoughts and express your opinions,no bitterness,only the peace lives in the prototype.

I will share my feeling of "the new" to all my people who can believe me and will ask them to share this feeling of prototype to all those who can believe so that all unites with peace.
